

What's YOUR Special Shoes for your kids to follow look like?

Here are some cool ideas of my own. If you like them, feel free to make them your own.

You never know, they may end up being a great family tradition!

- On a rainy day build an indoor fort with chairs and blankets. Create a theme. Maybe, it looks like a dragon's cave, a mystical castle, or even a hotrod car.
- Make up silly songs while giving your kids a bath. See the adventures come alive with bubbles atop their heads or soap beards on their faces.
- Make up a script with your kids, act it out on video, and keep it forever!
- Create bedtime stories using real life events from your childhood.
- At the end of the day, share your "high and low" part of your day with your kids. Ask them to share theirs. This is a really great way to connect to what is going on with your kids during the day.
- If Mom and Dad are having their second child, prepare the older sibling by making a family tree. Let them decorate the tree limb how they see the new baby.
- Once a week have a game, movie or out on the town, fun night.
- Journal your kids' lives from birth to adulthood and don't tell them. On their wedding day or the birth of their own child, give them the journal(s) + a new journal to carry on their own family tradition.

I hope you enjoyed these fun things to do with your children.

If you have created some fun ideas of your own and you want to share on my page, please leave me an email titled: "My special shoes for my kids to follow" and every couple of months I will update with new ideas from all of you!